

Fasudil was approved in Japan in 1995 and is no longer covered by a patent, meaning it is cheap.

The team is now looking at trialling the drug in combination with chemotherapy in people with pancreatic cancer, says Pajic.